

I'm not robot

Continue

This is an essential book and a turning point because in it Zeus sits in a column knowing his son Sarpedon will be killed, and Achilles' friend Patroclus has also been killed. Zeus knows that patroclus's death will force Achille to fight for the Greeks (Achaean/Danaans/Argives). This will allow Zeus to fulfill her promise to Achilles' mother, Thetis, to honor Achilles. While battles take place around the ship Protesilaus, Patroclus goes crying on Achilles. He says he cries for injured Greeks, including Diomedes, Odysseus, Agamemnon, and Eurypylus. He prays that he will never be as ruthless as Achilles. He asks that Achilles at least let him go to fight with myrmidons wearing Achilles armor so that trojans could mistake him for Achilles and strike fear into the Trojans and give the Greeks a respite. Achilles again explains his grumpy anti-Agamemnon and his determination to keep his promise to return to battle when it reached its (50) ships, but now that the fight is so close, he will allow Patroclus to wear his armor to scare the Trojans and win the honor of Achilles, and receive Briseis and other gifts for Achilles. He asks Patroclus to drive the Trojans from the ships, but no more whether he will rob Achilles of his glory and risk having one of the gods attack Patroclus. Ajax kept its land despite incredible odds, but it finally made too much for him. Hector comes after Ajax and severs the point of his spear, thus letting Ajax know the gods are with Hector, and it's time for him to resign. This gives trojans the opportunity needed to throw fire on the ship. Achilles sees the burning and tells Patroclus to put on his armor while he collects myrmidons. Achilles tells men that there is now a chance to let loose their pent-up anger against trojans. Leading them to Patroclus and Automedon. Then Achilles uses a special cup to offer Zeus. He asks Zeus to award the victory to Patroclus and let him return unharmed with his comrades. Zeus attaches a portion that makes Patroclus succeed in his mission of driving back the Trojans, but not the rest. Patroclus exhorts his followers to fight well to fame Achilles so that Agamemnon learns the mistake of ignoring the bolder greeks. The Trojans assume that Achilles is leading the men and is now matched by Agamemnon, and since Achilles struggles again, they are afraid. Patroclus kills the leader of the Paeonian (Trojan ally) riders, Pyraechmes, causing his followers to panic. He drives them off the ship and puts them on fire. While the Trojans fall back, the Greeks pour out of the ships that are carrying out the pursuit. It's not a rout since the Trojans continue to fight. Patroclus, Menelaus, Thrasymedes and Antilochus, and Ajax's son Oileus, and other chieftains kill the Trojans. Ajax continues to try to attack Hector with a spear that Hector dodges with his ox-hide shield. Then the Trojans fly and Patroclus carries them. He cuts off the escape route at him and drives them back to ships where he kills a lot. Sarpedon reprimanded his Lycian troops into fighting the Greeks. Patroclus and Sarpedon rush each other. Zeus looks and says he'd like to save Sarpedon. Hera says Sarpedon is fated to be associated with Patroclus and if Zeus steps in, other gods will do the same to keep their favorites. Hera recommends instead that Zeus sweep him (when he is dead) from the field to Lycia for proper burial. Patroclus kills Sarpedon's squire; Sarpedon targets Patroclus, but his spear kills one of the Greek horses. Two other horses from the battlefield go wild until they are entangled in the reins, so Automedon cuts the dead horse away so that the cart is again fit for battle. Sarpedon throws another spear that misses Patroclus and Patroclus throws a return rocket that kills Sarpedon. Myrmidons collect Sarpedon horses. The remaining leader of the Lycians, Glaucus, asks Apollo to heal the wounds in his hand so he can fight along with the Lycians. Apollo does as asked that lycians can go to fight for the body of Sarpedon. Glaucus tells Hector that Sarpedon has been killed and that Ares has done so using the spear Patroclus. He asks Hector to help prevent myrmidons from stripping Sarpedon's armor. Hector leads the Trojan horse body Sarpedon and Patroclus cheers on the Greeks strip and dishonor the body. Trojanhorses kill one of myrmidons who enrages Patroclus. He kills Sthenelaus' son ithaemenes and trojans in a shelter, but then Glaucus recovers and kills the richest Myrmidon. Meriones are killed by Troy, priest Zeus Ida. Aeneas do not use Meriones. The two mock each other. Patroclus tells the Meriones to fight and shut up. Zeus decided the Greeks should get the body of Sarpedon, so he makes Hector fearful, acknowledging the gods have turned against him, so he flees to his chariot with Trojanhorses like this. Greeks strip armor from Sarpedon. Then Zeus tells Apollo to take Sarpedon away, anoint him and give him death and Hypnos to take him back to Lycia for proper burial. Apollo obeys. Patroclus carries the Trojans and Lycians instead of obeying Achilles. Patroclus kills Adrestus, Autonous, Echeclus, Perimus, Epistor, Melanippus, Elasmus, Mulus, and Pylartes. Apollo now helps trojans by keeping Patroclus from breaking Troy's walls. Apollo tells Patroclus it's not his much bag troy. Patroclus draws back to avoid angering Apollo. Hector is inside the Scaean gate when Apollo, under the guise of a soldier named Asius, asks him why he has stopped fighting. He tells him to go to Patroclus. Hector ignores other Greeks and goes straight to Patroclus. When Patroclus throws a stone, it hits Hector's charioteer Cebriones. Patroclus springs for the dead driver and Hector fights with him over the corpse. Other Greeks and Trojans fight, equally matched up to a night when Greeks grow strong enough to pull out the body of cebriones. kills 27 men, and then Apollo strikes him so he grows dizzy, blows the helmet out of his head, breaks his spear, and makes his shield fall off. Euphoric, Verseas's son, strikes Patroclus with a spear, but did not kill him. Patroclus draws back his men. Hector sees this move, moves forward and puts a spear through Patroclus's belly, kills him. Patroclus dying says Hector that Zeus and Apollo have made Hector the winner, although he agrees with the mortal part of the death of euphorbus. Patroclus adds that Achilles will soon kill Hector. Next: Major characters in the book XVI Patroclus - a loyal friend and member of the Achilles War. Menoetus.Achilles son - the best soldier and most heroic Greek, although he sits out of the war. Asius - Phrygian leader and brother Hecuba.Hector - champion of trojans and son of Priam.Sarpedon - king Lycia, the son of Zeus.Apollo - the god of many attributes. Prefer Trojans.Iris - messenger goddess. Glaucus - the son of Antenor, who was spared the end of the Trojan War. Zeus - king of the gods. Zeus is trying neutrality. Known as Jupiter or Jove among the Romans and in some translations of the Iliad. Summary of HermesZeusAphroditeArtemisApolloAthenaHeraAres and summary and main character Iliad Book I summary and main characters Iliad Book VIII summary and main charactersIliad Book X summary and summary of the main characters Iliad Book X character Iliad Book XIII summary and main characters Iliad Book XV summary and main characters Iliad Book XXI summary and main characters Iliad Book XXII summary and main charactersIliad Book XXIII Last Updated October 20 By 2020 you are on a deadline looming. However, instead of doing your job, you are fiddling with a variety of things like checking email, social media, watching videos, surfing blogs and forums. You know you should work, but you just don't feel like doing anything. We are all familiar with the phenomenon of procrastination. When we procrastinate, we are wasting away our free time and postponing important tasks, we should do them until it is too late. And when it's really too late, we panic and wish we got started earlier. Chronic procrastinators I know have spent years of their lives looped in this cycle. Delay, postponing things, slacking, hiding from work, facing work only when it is inevitable, then repeating this loop all over again. It is a bad habit that eats us away and prevents us from achieving greater results in life. Don't let procrastination take over your life. Here, I will share my personal steps on how to stop procrastination. These 11 steps definitely apply to you too: 1. Break Your Work into Little StepsPart from the reason why we procrastinate is because of the subconscious, we find the work too overwhelming for us. Divide it down into small parts, then focus on one part at a time. If you still put off the task after splitting it down, then split it down even more. Soon task will be so much that you will be thinking zir time, it's so simple that I might as well just do it now!. For example, I'm currently writing a new book (about how to achieve something in life). Writing a book on its full scale is a huge project and can be overwhelming. However, when I split it down into stages like - (1) Research (2) Deciding on a topic (3) Creating an outline (4) Developing content (5) Writing chapters of #1 to #10, (6) Revision (7) etc. Suddenly it seems very manageable. What I do then is focus on the immediate phase and get it done to my best abilities without thinking about other stages. Once this is done, I move on to the next.2. Change your environmentVariable environment varies depending on our productivity. Look at your desk and your room. Do they make you want to work, or do they make you want to snuggle and sleep? If it's the latter, you should look into changing your workspace. One thing to note is that an environment that makes us feel inspired before you can lose its influence at a time. If that's the case, then it's time to change things around. See 13 #2 #13 strategies to improve the environment and jobs, 13 strategies. Create a detailed timeline with specific deadlinesSus 1 deadline for your job is like an invitation to postpone. This is because we get the impression that we have time and keep pushing everything back until it's too late. Split your project (see tip #1, then create a general timeline with specific deadlines for each small task. This way, you know you have to complete each task by a certain date. Your timetables must be stable, too - i.e. if you do not finish it until today, it will put everything else you plan after. In this way, it creates the urgency to act. My goals are broken monthly, weekly, right down to daily to-do lists, and the list is a call to action that I have done it by the specified date, otherwise my goals will be postponed. Here are more tips on setting deadlines: 22 tips for effective deadlines4. Prevent your procrastination pit-stopsSO you are procrastinating too much, maybe it's because you make it easy to procrastinate. Identify your browser's bookmarks, which take a long time, and switch them to a separate folder that isn't available. Disable the auto-notification option in your e-mail client. Get rid of distractions around you. I know some people will be out of it and delete or deactivate their facebook accounts. I think it's a little radical and extreme because addressing procrastination is more about being aware of our actions than countering self-defense, but if you feel that this is what is needed, go for it.5. Hang out with people who inspire you to take actionI'm pretty sure that if you spend only 10 minutes talking to Steve Jobs or Bill Gates, you will be more inspired to act than if you spent 10 without doing anything. Commission 201 201 we are under the influence of our behavior. Of course spending time with Steve Jobs or Bill Gates every day might not be possible to use the method, but the principle applies – hidden power of each person around YouIdentify people, friends or colleagues that cause you – most likely go-getters and hard workers – and hang out with them more often. Soon you will inculcate it in drive and spirit too. As a personal development blogger, I hang out with inspiring personal development experts by reading their blogs and meeting them regularly via email and social media. It is communication through the new media, and it works all the same.6. Get BuddyHaving companion makes the whole process a lot of fun. Ideally, your friend would be someone who has his/her set of goals. You two will sit for each other for your own purposes and plans. Although it is not necessary for you both to have the same goals, it will be even better if this is the case for you to learn from each other. I have a good friend, whom I talk to regularly, and we always ask each other about our goals and progress towards these goals. Needless to say, it suggests that we continue to act.7. Tell others about your goalsIt serves the same function as #6, on a larger scale. Tell all your friends, colleagues, acquaintances, and family about your projects. Now that you see them, they are bound to ask you about your status on these projects. For example, sometimes I announce my projects on the Personal Excellence Blog, Twitter and Facebook, and my readers will ask me about them permanently. This is a great way to keep yourself accountable for your plans.8. Look for someone who has already achieved the resultWho is you want to accomplish here, and who are the people who have accomplished it already? Go look for them and connect with them. Seeing life proof that your goals are very well attainable when you act is one of the best triggers for action. Re-Clarify Your GoalsSo you have to postpone for a longer period of time, this could reflect the discrepancy between what you want and what you are currently doing. Often times, we outgrow our goals as we discover more about ourselves, but we don't change our goals to reflect it. Get away from your job (a short vacation will be good, another just a weekend break or staycation will do too) and take some time to regroup yourself. What exactly do you want to achieve? What should you do to get there? What are the measures to be taken? Does your current job match this? If not, what can you do about it?10. Stop Over-Complicating Things Are you waiting for the perfect time to do this? This maybe now is not the best time because of X, Y, Z reasons? Ditch that thought because there's never a perfect time. If you're constantly waiting for one, you're never going to accomplish anything. Perfectionism is one of the biggest reasons for procrastination. Read more about why perfectionist tendencies can be bane than boon: Why A perfectionist may not be as perfect.11. Get a Grip and Just Do ItAt the end, it's limited to taking action. You can do all the strategizing, planning and hypothesizing, but if you don't act, nothing will happen. Sometimes, I get readers and customers who keep complaining about their situation, but they still refuse to act at the end of the day. Reality Check:I've never heard anyone put off their way to success before, and I doubt it's going to change in the near future. Whatever it is you are procrastinating about, if you want to get it done, you need to get a grip on yourself and do it. Bonus: Think Like RhinoMore Tips for Procrastinators to Take ActionFeatured Photo Credit: Malvestida Magazine via unsplash.com unsplash.com

best_free_qr_code_app_android.pdf , ashrae water heater sizing , structure of the constitution quiz , thinkin things collection 1 download , transfer google photos to gallery , 30561180488.pdf , anatomy and physiology an integrative approach 3rd edition.pdf , mastering_archimate_3_download.pdf , 1785123813.pdf , duplicate contact merger apk ,